

Advancing Sexual Health Education (ASHE) Through Youth Engagement

Do you teach sex education in high school or middle school? Is it difficult to keep classes relevant for students?
Meet health education standards? Find time for professional development?

The Advancing Sexual Health Education (ASHE) Through Youth Engagement project is a virtual, 12-week ECHO training, community of practice designed as a closed cohort for school staff responsible for teaching sexual health education.

We are looking for individuals to participate who are:

- Currently employed as an educator or school health staff (e.g. school nurse, counselor);
- Responsible for teaching sexual health education content in a New Mexico high school or middle school.

If you agree to participate, you will receive:

- Skills-based sexual health education training;
- Supportive community of practice;
- Up-to-date teaching materials;
- $300 electronic gift cards ($150 mid-way in program, $150 end of program);
- Continuing education credits for licensed professions.

For more information call/text: 505-225-8307
or email ASHE-ECHO@salud.unm.edu or to schedule an interview.

